

Agriculture and the Economy

Agriculture and housing is a planetary issue, as we can't afford to let anyone starve, and we all need a roof over our head, and space to call our own.

Transporting food over long distances is wasteful, and where possible should be done locally. As if there is a planetary emergency (i.e. an outbreak of disease) then everything is going to get quarantined, meaning all transport links will be cut, and your not going to get any coming in.

This means the world is probably going to have to be broken up into zones (I think we call it nations, currently) as we decide how to grow it.

Obviously the first model is to trust the capitalist idea, of market forces, under the notion that if people don't want it, they won't pay for it, and well the farmers will grow something else instead, unfortunately the people are stupid, don't think ahead, and are unlikely to consider the big picture. (this perhaps is an overly harsh picture) as stock can be wiped out, without warning, and that's not good either. so I think we need to do better here. as no one on this planet should be going hungry in this day and age. and we need to plan accordingly, as this is a military issue.

obviously the people should be able to choose what they buy, what they eat with as much variety as possible, however there is liable to be a short fall, and some incentive is liable to be needed, as well as perhaps taxation to discourage transport across certain links, if it is creating a military risk, i.e. an area dependent on another area, as they need to be able to safeguard their own, so I am going to be an arse here.

there needs to be minimum safeguards in place for regions, i.e. whats the bare minimum of x, they can take, and everything above that is traded freely inter alia as variety is the spice of life, but safety comes first and yes the idea of the people electing me ruler of the world, with their own freewill, appeals!

as god tried to do it by force, and I think I'm better than that.

as for the economy

This is screwed, and I can't see what needs to be cut, without access to the accounts, and the database... this needs to be online, as everyone has to see where our money is going, and how to cut costs (radical concept I know, trusting the public with data!!!) but it has to be done.

I specialise in databases, this information is easy to make public! as government is essentially a company, of incomings and outgoings. i.e. we bring money in, and we spend money, and it should be run on that basis. i.e. we should be looking to cut our reliance on third parties, and sell out skills overseas to bring money in, if we have nothing to offer, then we can't do this and we fail.

Simple Equation: money going out = none coming in, means less to tax, go around internally, and more haemorrhaging . Which is why it's a bad idea to start outsourcing to india in i.t. as it puts more people out of work, (who then need benefit) and makes our own infrastructure fall further behind , as we need to compete in the international world!

The Devils Views...

as its simply a case of incoming, and outgoings, its not rocket science, if you start a company up, and spend it on third parties, you have nothing coming in, and go bust, and it's the same with Britain, you have to make yourself self sufficient, and bring money in!!! which means cutting costs, and well being self sufficient, which these governments seem to fail to understand, as there is no loyalty to the country anymore.

however that been said, we need to co-operate more in getting the basics set up, so we can all enjoy the pleasures of this world, by raising the standards throughout. This should be done at a local level, and we can trade the skills we have, in order to make this work, but not at the expense of our own falling behind.

However not to be a party pooper, as I introduce my communist/socialist ideas on top of my capitalist reform. i.e. I would rather we paid everyone the same in benefit, and taxed the rest (i.e. all surplus income/profit instead) as this would make it easier to invest in business, as currently your either in a position where you get no support, or lots.

i.e. people with lots of support aren't allowed to do anything, as they loose the support, and there is no reason to do anything, while the rest are punished for making the choice to invest in their lives, and their business, and its just not fair. which is why I would rather cut the crap, give everyone the same, so we have a safety net, so no one is left behind, ignored.

as this burocratic system, of council tax, and who can and can't pay is a waste of money. you spend more money trying to argue who gets what, which results in people being left behind, missed and persecuted, by morons, who abuse the system.

make the pledge to work as a team, share our profit equally between one and all, and those who do more will be rewarded, and it ceases to be a war against us and them.

Ideally I'd love for this to work on the international level, but until people start working together locally, its hard to see how this would work, as people need to learn to share, and the only way your going to do this, is if you pay people benefit even if they are working, and not!

i.e. its simple, clean and you tax the rest! no confusion and people know where they stand, working together as a team, as Britain will then raise and fall as a nation, rather than as a pack of wolves at each others throats.

I can't pay council tax, and I have no intention to know, even if I could. I would rather renounce Britain, and form my own independent state, and or die. as these morons keep trying to screw you over, and its wrong, as it would seem my nation of birth would rather persecute me, and burn me as a witch because I was honest, because I spoke my mind, and declared me outcast for trying to bring money in.

so screw the lot, if they don't want to share, I won't with them, and any money I make (assuming I do in future) will go elsewhere, which is why you have to learn to share early, before those who do make money take it elsewhere... as we [the people]have long memories, and you've turned it into a war of rewarding those who do nothing, and persecuting those who do, as you have to embrace all cultures, all beliefs and all ideas.

Instead your killing them at birth! must be all that Christian teaching going to your heads "though shalt not suffer a witch to live.." and I'd laugh - but its not funny, as your killing us in the field, while funding people abroad instead! Free is an illusion, and everything has its price! I'm a witch, deal with it please.
