

The Devils Views...

Law and Order

If the police illegally break into your home without a warrant, I think you should pick up the nearest fire arm and kill them, or failing that run them through with a sword citing self defence/necessity. As your defending you home and your land from incompetence.

In fact if I'm on the jury, I will let you off, as I believe you should be able to defend your home and your person to the death from unwarranted aggression, and I have no issue with duelling in the street to settle a dispute so long as no innocents come to harm/are put at risk by your action and my views aren't going to change on this.

If society requires or demands more policing it has already failed, as we the people should work together because we want to, not out of fear and as such I hate the notion of police walking the streets, in any number at all. especially in packs of 3, in broad daylight with no issues in sight. as it seems overkill if you ask me! one is enough.

Obviously there are times, when I would like to see police present, i.e. when you have a large number of jobs, who are unable to control themselves, or their aggression present, so people can chill for once. I do not like to watch videos of Essex police, spraying mace into an immobilised mans face. this is wrong, and shouldn't be tolerated in any society at all. As our cops need to be intelligent enough to control their actions, and to respect even the most despicable of foe. I would love them all to be black belts in aikido as well, and to know that Scotland is indeed in the EU, and subject to human rights law. I would also like them to know what human rights law is. as well as the law continued in the police sergeants manual - as I get stroppy when the police break in illegally (especially when I'm in the bath) with no evidence and then refuse to press charges against those who committed fraud under section 128 of the mental health act, because I'm a no body inter alia. and can be easily fobbed off.

Now most of you will probably notice a theme developing me, getting annoyed at the police when they continually overstep the line, when they show up twice in a row to press speeding tickets, which shouldn't be their concern and I hate it when they start framing statements how they like, and start playing politics on the street. As their job is merely to keep the peace, and gather the facts. While it is the crowns prosecution job, who decides if its in the public interest to prosecute or not Which means that the attorney general office should be elected, like it is in the states. as the people ought to get a say in what crimes they prosecute. Though this perhaps won't help minorities who get screwed regardless of who in power, as I have to all intents and purpose given up on the law in Britain in general. and argued as such in the royal courts of justice. when I declared "parliament is not the law" because that goes to consent, and stands above us uncensored, as no man, religion or government has the right to steal the law, and claim it as their own, as the many do not rule the one, and no man or women has the right to impose their belief set on any other, without consent. I do not consent to this unelected parliament, and its rules. as 16.2% of the population voting the labour majority in, makes no majority at all, and assuming they could make a majority. it does not give you the right to take our freedom away. democracy is 7 men voting to rape a women, they are in majority, and have no respect for the underling freedoms which protect us, which is why I ignore your law. as we the people have a right to protect those who do not consent to an act, and who request our aid, but that is it. Moralists have no place in power, and I am a libertarian through and through, if you want to take drugs, go naked in the street (or completely covered) that is your choice as a freeman, and likewise if you want to beat the crap out of each other, skydive or duel in the street that is your right, as long as you consent to the act. as freedom matters more here.

I think Britain has no respect for freedom, and seeks to impose its belief set over people, and its crossed the line, I find our judges bigoted, out of touch and fearful of the law. they have no respect for it, and argue parliament instead, and I have nothing but contempt for it, as not one of them seems capable of writing a rounded judgment at all. the ECHR can, and go to great lengths to write verdicts, while Britain seems to cover it up.

Our judges need to be forced to write statements showing they have understood the case, and all the argument presented there in, currently they ignore them, and this is wrong. if someone makes seven arguments, you can't pick on one, and ignore the rest. that is wrong, you have to argue the lot!

In the meantime we seem to have lost all notion of a pluralistic society, and the separation of power appears lost for good. we have the prosecution laughing away with "independent legal advisors" in council tax cases, with no representation at all for the people on the street. we need representation, and judges which understand the law, and it would help if they could find Strasbourg, or even Europe on the map!

I want the charter of fundamental freedoms in british law, and I would sign up to any charter with any court if it had any chance of making our judges behave. as words are humpty dumpty and its clear from verdict sin the us supreme court, that judges can argue what they want. and well I wouldn't mind so much, but our judges don't even bother to make it look balanced anymore.

this makes me sick, as I have no respect for the British legal system at all, as they appear more interested in sucking up to one another, then arguing the law.

the people have been forgotten, and have been scared off arguing anything at all, as bureaucracy, after bureaucracy scares them with the threat of money, and fees. and tries to blackmail them into pleading guilty for crimes they didn't commit, because it would be better then pleading not guilty at all. this is wrong. you should argue everything, don't take those speeding tickets on faith, they have to prove the evidence in a court of law. as it could have been another car, stealing your plates. Was it your rubbish in that bin? I think not it could have been anyone's, like your next door neighbours perhaps. wheres the proof? As I hate it when the people are scared into submission by morons looking to exploit them for an easy life, as that is wrong, and I would defend them at every turn. so rip up those fines, and take it to court, and if you loose that, the next one in turn.

Your innocent till proven guilty in Britain (or should be) and its time to live up to that. We must argue every little point, concede nothing, assume nothing, as we're better then that or should be at least. So stand as one, against many and defend your land. look evil in the eye, and say no, I will not budge, this is my land, my freedom and we will never surrender to fear as every man and women has the right to do as they will, in Britain today.

Holding people without charge is wrong. we should never have gone back on the magna carta, and parliament is in breach of the 1689 bill of rights, as they do not have (and never will) have the authority to take our freedom away. it was a pledge recognising our freedoms as they stand, and as such is not subject to the review of parliament. which is currently acting like the 7 men, who would vote to rape a women (the country) to death.

It is ultra vires, and it has no right to strip our freedom away. you can't hold people without charge for more then 24 hours, that is wrong, we all have the right of habeous corpus, and you don't get the right to dictate whos belief is right, as we all get to speak, and share our ideas, and if you can't handle that, you don't belong in civilised society at all, as we have the right to restrain people, who pose a risk to society (in that they may bludgeon someone to death, and we have the evidence to show that as well (and it better be good!!!)) but no more.

You have to give people - and nations - the benefit of the doubt, do not fire until fired upon, and leave them well alone.

By all means, go to someone aid, but they better consent to it, I have no issue with suicide, if that is their right. (Why didn't you help them? locking them up, isn't help!!!) though I don't trust the medical profession when it comes to euthanasia, because it could be misused, and well the majority always did delight in screwing individuals, and the minority over. see the T-4 wards in hitlers day, and the concentration camps for more, as no sooner do you give the people a set of rules the abuse it.

much like the old saying that the iq of the mob is the iq of the lowest person their, divided by the number of people in the mob [or organisation], and when that mob is the health service, the iq gets very low indeed. as for some reason, people stop thinking in groups! I have no idea why, they just do and I am sick of it inter alia bon sur. though I have no idea how to get people thinking again.

I think the police would do better, setting up a table in the street (perhaps collecting money, after I cut their budgets to bits) in order to become approachable again, as people don't like the police walking up to them, asking them questions in the street. as even if you do win the argument, and they bugger off, you still feel violated, and put under stress, as it become a us, against them mentality. and we the people are fighting for freedom, and we sometimes forget who they are. some are alright, others aren't, and I suppose it's a matter of taste.

I don't like licensing law, as I don't think the majority gets to say, who sells what, who plays what music, and well I think it should be a first come, first served policy, with market forces in play. I would legalise brotherals. I have no issue with sex, or my body. and well some women, just love to watch a bloke play - to orgasm inter alia - though I have yet to receive money for it, mores the pity, and I am cool with that, as we Love to entertain, but yes it would be nice to make a living from it, instead! As I reflect on how everyone wants it free! and go yes, freedoms cool, but I would so like to be paid for it (perhaps arguing statute for free)
